

CORPORATE TRANSACTIONS

Galloway Johnson | Corporate Transactions

Galloway Johnson regularly counsels corporations and businesses of all sizes on many types of corporate transactions, from the initial organization of a business entity through final winding down and dissolution, merger or conversion. Our business attorneys also have in-depth knowledge of the local community in which they practice, and the unique issues and dynamics that affect interests in their local area. This insight, combined with our personal commitment to the communities in which we practice, inspires our clients with confidence and comfort -- because they know they're partnering with a law firm that understands detailed local issues and matters.

Galloway Johnson transactional work includes creation and review of Master Service Agreements; Bareboat Charter Agreements; Master Time Charter Agreements; stock repurchases; the creation of corporations, limited liability companies and other business entities, along with By-Laws, Articles of Organization, Operating Agreements, Plans of Merger and Conversion, and other corporate documents.

The firm also represents corporations and businesses in commercial litigation matters arising out of breach of contracts, defense and indemnity agreements, employment agreements, mineral lien interests, collections, and other corporate matters.
