

E-Commerce

From startups to industry strongholds, Galloway counsels clients on a broad range of e-commerce and technology-related legal issues that arise in our rapidly evolving digital marketplace. We understand the legal and technical nuance needed to help our clients succeed on this ever-changing landscape. Our attorneys not only offer a unique blend of experience, legal savvy, and technical knowledge, we take the time to understand the businesses our clients have built and work with them to find practical solutions to meet their needs.

Our e-commerce work includes preparing and analyzing master service agreements (such as those involving IT services, internet service providers, and data processing); website formation and maintenance agreements (website development, hosting, terms of use, privacy policies, and data collection); electronic contracting (click-wrap and browse-wrap agreements); cloud computing matters; and software and hardware licensing agreements.

Our attorneys also are devoted to assisting entrepreneurs identify and manage the legal issues their companies encounter, including corporate planning; data management and asset protection policies; and vendor agreements.
