ABOUT ARMAND

Armand Louis Cortellesso is a Tampa-based defense attorney who represents Florida clients in first-party property insurance matters and bodily injury litigation. His background as a project manager for a residential construction company and his experience handling claims in-house for a Florida insurer inform his practice, giving him a practical understanding of how claims are evaluated, damages are assessed, and litigation decisions impact individuals, businesses, and insurers.

Armand is intentional with his time and approach, working closely with clients to understand their priorities, risk tolerance, and objectives so matters are handled efficiently and strategically. His prior experience as a former Assistant State Attorney, combined with his work for major national insurers in bodily injury litigation, provides a well-rounded perspective on complex disputes and courtroom advocacy. He cuts through the clutter with concise, direct communication, clearly outlining options, exposure, and a practical path toward resolution.

A Rhode Island native, Armand enjoys reading non-fiction history and classic novels, traveling, and making the occasional trip to Disney World.
