ABOUT KATHLEEN

Kathleen Charvet has practiced admiralty and maritime law for more than 25 years. Her experience and knowledge of the intricacies of the laws and regulations governing this area of practice enable her to counsel, represent, and advocate for offshore, vessel, employer, and defense contractor clients. Kathleen engages in a collaborative practice with clients to determine the best strategies for protecting and defending their interests; she coordinates with medical, engineering, safety, and vocational expert witnesses; mediators; the bench; and other attorneys to attain optimum results.

While Kathleen focuses her practice on admiralty and maritime law, with a concentration on the Longshore and Harbor Workers' Compensation Act, the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act, and the Defense Base Act, her other practices include railroad and transportation defense, federal workers' compensation, and labor and employment law. Throughout her legal career, Kathleen has represented vessel owners, manufacturers, and operators; military employers; railroads and transportation companies; stevedoring companies and terminal operators; energy companies; multi-national chemical technology companies; government contractors; and insurance underwriters. Whether the case occurred aboard a vessel or offshore platform, on a military base, commercial train or transportation, dockside, or shipyard, Kathleen has the skills and experience to advise her clients in the boardroom and defend them in the courtroom.

Kathleen has served as trial and appellate defense counsel in litigation involving personal injury claims brought by Jones Act seamen, Longshore and Harbor Workers Compensation Act claimants, and Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act offshore workers. She defends Defense Base Act claims, Federal Employers Liability Act lawsuits, contractual disputes, limitation of liability, vessel arrests and attachments, as well as issues involving regulatory matters before the U.S. Coast Guard, the National Labor Relations Board, and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.
