ABOUT MICHAEL

Michael J. Corso is a Tampa-based litigator who represents insurers in first- and third-party property insurance disputes throughout Florida. His practice focuses on property damage claims, including coverage disputes, bad faith allegations, and litigation arising from residential and commercial losses. Michael works closely with carriers and claims professionals to assess exposure, navigate coverage issues, and efficiently resolve disputes.

Before transitioning to defense work, Michael represented policyholders in property insurance matters. Experience on the opposing side informs his perspective to evaluating claims, anticipating counter arguments, and developing practical strategies focused on favorable resolution. He approaches each matter with careful preparation and critical thinking, working to identify key issues and determine the most effective path forward.

Michael was born and raised in Tampa. Outside of his practice, he enjoys fishing, going to concerts, seeing movies, watching TV shows with his fiancée, and playing video games with his friends spread across the country.
